Gender Based Violence Action Network for Students: GBVANS

GBVANS Statement of Concern
Self-Swab 'Rape Kits'

September 2026

Statement of Concern Regarding Self-Swab 'Rape Kits' by Greater Manchester Universities and the Gender Based Violence Action Network for Students*

We stand with partners across the sexual violence sector in raising concerns about self-swab 'rape kits'. We are particularly concerned with how organisations are targeting their promotion towards students. Manchester Metropolitan University, The University of Manchester and the University of Salford, as providers of Sexual Violence Liaison Officer support to students across the city, want to promote choice and ensure that students are fully informed on their options. We understand why, following an incident of sexual violence, students may seek alternative options, and we remain committed to ensuring that students, staff and the wider community have access to clear, accurate and evidence-based information and support.

Drawing on from knowledge shared within the sector, we do not feel that self-swab kits are a replacement for specialist support, whether that be from a university service, external charity, or local NHS Sexual Assault Referral Centre (SARC), who can safely collect forensic evidence. Manchester Metropolitan University, The University of Manchester and the University of Salford do not endorse these kits, and we have no partnership or affiliation with the companies behind them.

Specialist organisations across the UK who provide support to victims of sexual violence have raised their concerns about these kits. The Faculty of Forensic & Legal Medicine at the Royal College of Physicians have recommended that these kits are not used, which was supported by Rape Crisis England and Wales, and more recently, the National Police Chiefs Council / National Centre for tackling Violence Against Women and Girls and Public Protection issued a clear statement regarding these kits.

Universities aim to create safe and supportive environments where students' wellbeing is our main priority. University students can work with specialist staff, who are trained to provide support and information following rape or sexual assault. Your university has a dedicated team that you can contact via an online disclosure platform called Report and Support, empowering you to make your own choices, when you're ready and ensuring you have access to specialist help (Report and Support Manchester; Report and Support MMU; Report-it University of Salford). This may include signposting to the local SARC, which does not require you to make a Police report to access their services.

We offer support to all survivors, regardless of gender, sexuality, or background. We can also offer support to those who are supporting a survivor. Whether an incident happened recently or some time ago, help is available and you do not have to face it alone.

Gender Based Violence Action Network (GBVAN)

In 2021, the University of Manchester established the Gender Based Violence Action Network (GBVAN) for Students in partnership with the other Manchester Universities, Students' Unions, Greater Manchester Police, Local Authority and Local Services.

The network is committed to providing an effective partnership response to sexual violence and harassment for Manchester's significant student population.

The network aims to;

1. Improve our understanding of trends and patterns in sexual violence against students;
2. Increase students' confidence, trust, and awareness in reporting incidents to both GMP and the University;
3. Facilitate holistic multi-agency support for student victim/survivors of sexual violence
4. Share relevant campaigns and communications across partners to raise awareness of these issues amongst students;
5. Identify and share good practice in Manchester, nationally and internationally.
6. To highlight issues of sexual violence against students to wider bodies such as local and national government

The network recognises and understands the importance of these issues within different student communities. The individual universities in partnership with Students' Unions will consult with relevant student groups for feedback on the work of the network and to set priorities and the direction of the group. Particularly important is the student/survivor voice and the network is committed to capturing and enhancing this.

If you would like any more information about the network, please contact co-Chair of the Network, Spencer Davies*, Head of Advice and Response (Safeguarding, Gender-Based Violence and Hate). Email:spencer.davies@manchester.ac.uk
