

What you can do for Climate Week 4-10 March 2013

Climate Week highlights solutions and positive steps that enable people to live and work more sustainably, so helping to combat climate change. Half a million people attend 3,000 events and activities for Britain's biggest environmental occasion. Here are some ways that you or your organisation can be part of it, completely for free.

Run an event that suits your organisation

People run many kinds of events for Climate Week such as conferences, competitions, exhibitions, bike rides, and talks. Plan something that suits your organisation – it could be a private event for a few people or a public event for hundreds. Please register it at www.climateweek.com/run-an-event to make it part of a movement for change.

Enter the Climate Week Challenge

The Climate Week Challenge is an exciting competition for teams of four to six people of any age. It can be done on any day of Climate Week and there are two versions - one-day and one-hour. No preparation is needed and any school or organisation can take part. Visit www.climateweek.com/challenge to register.

Run a Climate Week Swap

We all have things we don't want, like clothes that don't suit us or films we don't watch. Now you can swap these for great things you do want by running a Climate Week Swap for friends, workmates or neighbours. You can also win swaps with celebrities such as tennis star Andy Murray, comedian Russell Brand and actress Zoe Wanamaker. Visit www.climateweek.com/join-the-swap to register.

Host the Climate Week Pub Quiz

The Climate Week Pub Quiz will be run by hundreds of pubs, offices and community groups. Taking a witty and irreverent look at eco-issues, it lasts about one hour with categories such as Entertainment and Geography. Visit www.climateweek.com/run-an-event/climate-week-pub-quiz to register for a free quiz pack.

Cook Bubble & Squeak for Climate Week

Thousands of people will make this traditional British fry-up of leftovers for Climate Week, saving waste and showing that delicious food can protect the environment. You can make it yourself, or ask your canteen or a local cafe to put it on the menu. Register your Bubble & Squeak at www.climateweek.com/green-your-cuisine

Win an Award

The Climate Week Awards recognise outstanding work that helps combat climate change – celebrating the UK's most innovative and ambitious organisations, communities and people. Visit www.climateweek.com/awards and enter for free.
